

Please do not enact any legislation that would weaken the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law. In the 42 years I have had my own home, these past few months (since the law was in force) are the first in which my husband and I have had peace from the telephone. It means so much to know that its ring signifies a message of importance to us instead of summoning us for a solicitor's convenience. We pay the bill; we should be protected as we are now!
